Whilst taking on building my own personal CMS system I have been working closely with my brother in law on a Frontend Design project for a crypto currency known as Side Kick. They asked us to provide a fresh new look for a page they wanted to integrate into their current website which is using React.js and the Bootstrap framework. We put together a mock up copy of our vision of the page, and on selection to carry out the work, we managed to implement the new design and new page style within the time scale given, finishing the page with a very professional look which fits in with the rest of the website.

During my time at The Laptop Workshop I used my logical mind-set to help streamline a lot of the old and dated processes, which in-turn allowed for a more streamline service for customers. I designed new procedures for how the workload was dealt with after being booked in which allowed for improved turnaround times, easier to track job statuses, and how far from completion a job was.
